I wish schools could encourage families to see that holding children accountable is a positive thing. Students need more physical activity and less computer time.

I am not a teacher - so some of these questions (even though I selected non instructional) I don't fact based input on so I selected as well as I could. However after being with the district for many years - and seeing the changes in the needs of the students - I don't believe we are doing justice to what some of these students need. I feel like there is a "just keep things from getting worse" attitude and pushing students thru that doesn't help the child, the family or the district. I understand we cannot "parent" these children - and I don't think that BCSD is alone in this battle - just it saddens me to see so many kids just "dealt" with instead of helped. I also recognize we are an educational facility - NOT a mental health/social health facility but an increasing number of our students need more than we can offer. Like I mentioned I am not a teacher and I am not up to date with what we are required to do - but I just see so many students we are failing because they need more than what a public elementary school is capable of providing. Additionally while we try to meet those needs - the students who would benefit from advancement in math or reading - are being left behind. I have two large frustrations I would like heard. First - the lack of resources I have when a student/students have issues during lunch/recess. Frequently we have no one to go to. While sometimes the issue can wait to be addressed - we have many issues that deserve immediate attention (fighting, inappropriate language or bullying) and there is no point person especially when our principal is out of the building. Second - I have been with the district for a long time. While I may only work 3 hours a day - I can't help but say how disvalued I feel most of the time. I am a professional who takes my job seriously and doesn't take time off on a whim. I am an adult who loves being with the kids but has a real life outside of recess. I am not a teacher who entered a profession knowing the sacrifices and benefits of a teachers schedule. I am someone who is more than willing to go above and beyond to help out in my school - for a child - for a teacher - but is questioned when I need a few days off to celebrate my own adult children, much needed family time or time to mourn. I understand my contract doesn't allow for personal/sick days and these are union issues - but I really think the district needs to be more understanding and accepting of time off requests. I personally know of 4 noon hour aides who left because of this "no time allowed" policy! What a shame and loss for the district! Right now - I am basically "encouraged" to call in sick when I need a day for my family instead of requesting the day off and allowing the sub caller to find a replacement. I am NOT suggesting paid leave - I am NOT suggesting unlimited time off etc - I AM suggesting GRACE, UNDERSTANDING. APPRECIATION. Nothing I have ever felt from the district. Thank you for reading this and I hope you understand my point of view.

Better communication through the ranks, from principal down to custodians.

I believe this school needs to provide more training, and drills for part time employees that are not there all day to experience the mandated drills. Much of the staff is uncertain as to handle such situtations should they ever occur.
better communication for staff also - these questions are not well written and the answer options are insufficient - there should be a n/a option and a slighlty disagree/agree option....
